Introduction

This is the ninth in a series of reports on the demographic makeup of Top 10% students entering The University of Texas at Austin. These reports were developed to provide easy access to understandable data for the press, the general public, policy analysts, political decision-makers, and fellow academicians.

The Texas Top 10% Law (HB 588) requires the automatic admission of any student graduating in the top 10% of an accredited Texas high school.

As in past reports, the entering summer/fall class of 1996 is a comparison group. It was the last year in which students were admitted under a classic admissions model using affirmative action to assist in the accomplishment of the University's diversity goals.¹ (Affirmative Action was re-introduced to the admissions process with the entering class of 2005.) The continuation and graduation rates of these students are illustrated in a companion to this report.

This paper is designed to present simple, descriptive statistics relative to graduates of Texas high schools matriculating as entering freshmen from 1996-2006. This is not a position paper. It is not an evaluation of past or present affirmative action policies. It is not a proposed blueprint for other universities or public institutions seeking diversity. It is not representative of the higher education experience in all of Texas. It is merely another chapter about what has happened at The University of Texas at Austin the year before the interruption of affirmative action (1996), the years in which there was no affirmative action (1997-2004), and its return (2005 and 2006).

SAT MEAN AND FRESHMAN GPA BY UNDERGRADUATE COLLEGES AND ETHNICITY
Entering 1996

Note: N-counts below represent students with a college admissions test score. SAT means represent SAT combined scores and concorded ACT scores. As is the case with the UT admissions routine, students submitting more than one set of scores were given the benefit of the best performance from a single test date. Students with no hours toward a GPA were excluded from the computation of the GPA mean. On very rare occasions students are admitted as freshmen to Pharmacy. Those are included in the total but are not listed.
